III. Case Study (50 points)

Directions: Complete the following tasks and write your answers in the given space on the ANSWER SHEET. Questions 26-28 are based on Case 1 and Question 29 is based on Case 2.

Case 1

Setting: A and B are two students from different countries. The dialogue is in the classroom a couple of minutes before the class begins.

A: Hi, Bob, are you doing anything tonight?

B: (Slightly shakes his head) No, why?

A: I've got two tickets for The Butterfly Effect. (Eagerly) Like to go with me?

B: Sure. (The instructor comes in and B lowers his voice) When?

A: (Puts his index finger over his lips) Shh. Let's talk after class. (B nods and smiles)

26. Complete the process of communication with the missing components. (6 points)

In this dialogue, A wants to invite B to go to see the movie with him. A starts the dialogue and he is the (1) — the point at which information or interaction originates. A organizes his idea and puts it into words — verbal code. Such a process is called (2). A expresses his idea — the message by way of talking, which is the verbal (3). B, the receiver of the message, after interpreting the message through the process of (4). The entrance of the teacher interferes with the talk and is considered “noise” of the interaction. A knows that his invitation has been accepted and decides to talk about it later. Here the receiver B's (5) to the message enables A to understand how his message has been taken, such information is called (6).

27. List the factors that could be “noises” in intercultural communication. (6 points)

28. Illustrate that verbal and nonverbal communication overlap. (8 points)

Case 2

John Anderson, an American professor, was invited to give a lecture at a Chinese university. The Program Director, Dr. Li chaired the meeting.

Although some students were a little late, most were attentive and applauded warmly when the lecture came to an end. During the Q & A session, Professor Anderson asked if they had any questions but no one raised their hands, even after they were encouraged to do so. When his eyes eagerly scanned the audience, most students kept silent and lowered their heads to avoid eye contact with him.

At last, Dr. Li helped select a few students and Professor Anderson surprisingly found that they could ask very good questions. He recalled his experiences of giving lectures at home and the students always volunteered challenging questions.

29. List THREE cultural patterns and/or intercultural communication concepts related to the above case and elaborate each perspective with relevant information in the passage to indicate your clear understanding about intercultural communication. You have to first write out each perspective on the shorter lines.
